

The State of Texoma

Vs.

Nik Phealgud

2017 Collin County Bar Association
8th Grade Mock Trial Competition

STIPULATED FACTS:

On September 3, 2016, famed singer and performer Clovis Priestly was found dead in his house. He had gone to bed at around 5:00 am and was found at 3:00 pm in his bathroom. The parties stipulate that Mr. Priestly had prescriptions for over 1000 pills of each of his medications during the 30 days prior to the date of death. In addition, it was discovered that he had prescriptions for over 10,000 of the pills in the prior twelve month period.

After an investigation by Jo Kuppa, Dr. Nik Phealgud is charged with criminally negligent homicide. The Texoma Penal Code Section 19.05 reads "a person commits the offense of criminal negligent homicide if he or she causes the death of another by criminal negligence. An offense under this section is a 4th degree felony."

"Criminal negligence" is defined as follows: A person acts with criminal negligence, or is criminally negligent, with respect to circumstances surrounding his conduct or the result of his conduct when he ought to be aware of a substantial and unjustifiable risk that the circumstances exist or the result will occur. The risk must be of such a nature and degree that the failure to perceive it constitutes a gross deviation from the standard of care that an ordinary person would exercise under all of the circumstances as viewed from the actor's standpoint.

The state of Texoma will call 3 witness:

1. Dr. Wilson Kildare
2. Sam Snare
3. Jo Kuppa

The Defense will call 3 witnesses:

1. Dr. Nik Phealgud
2. Dr. Lou Smith
3. Toni Taggart

A criminal background check shows that Toni Taggart has been convicted of theft and making a false report to a police officer. Both are considered crimes of moral turpitude. If asked about any relevant criminal convictions, the witness must admit the criminal records are accurate.

The autopsy report and the Report of Investigation are an exhibit. Both exhibits have been stipulated as admissible as a properly authenticated business record.

Affidavit of Dr. Wilson Kildare

My name is Wilson Kildare. I am 49 years old and I am a licensed medical doctor. I have been employed by Republic County as the Medical Examiner for the last 12 years.

On September 3, 2016, I was called to the house of Clovis Priestly known as "Spaceland". Mr. Priestly was in distress. By the time I arrived, Mr. Priestly was deceased. The apparent cause of the death was a heart attack. On the report, I stated the cause of death as hypertensive cardio vascular disease. I was told that Mr. Priestly had been suffering from heart related conditions for some time and it appeared to be a simple heart attack. Mr. Priestly was not in the best physical shape and his history revealed that he had a few instances where he had been hospitalized within the year.

When I arrived, he was already in a rigid state. I was informed that CPR was attempted, but when he was found, his jaw was locked shut so CPR was unsuccessful. We had him transported to Boys Memorial Hospital for treatment, but there was basically nothing that could be done. Although I felt there was no foul play involved, I asked for and received consent from the family to perform an autopsy. Mr. Priestly was only 42 years old when he died and it just did not make sense.

I performed an autopsy on September 19, 2016. The findings of the autopsy are provided as an exhibit. However, since the time of the autopsy, I have reviewed the findings and based upon information that has been relayed to me, I believe the cause of death, while a heart attack is accurate, it was caused by abusing medications. The reason that Mr. Priestly was able to abuse medications was because his doctor, Dr. Phealgud, over prescribed those medications.

Upon looking into the death, I was advised that there were some issues with Mr. Priestly's health that concerned family members and friends. One was an unusually close relationship with Dr. Phealgud. Dr. Phealgud was at the house when I arrived and was at BMH when the body was brought there. I just felt some of Dr. Phealgud's actions were unprofessional and odd. I later learned of a history of massive prescriptions given to Mr. Priestly. It is my opinion that Mr. Priestly was overprescribed pain killers and sedatives and stimulants. I performed the autopsy and discovered all of these items in his system. I also found that his heart was enlarged and so were almost all of his organs. The cause of the enlarged heart and other organs was long term abuse of prescription medications including pain killers, but especially the sedatives and stimulants.

In my medical opinion, a person should not take more than 2 pills of each of those medications on a daily basis. That would be 8 pills per day, which is still a high dose and I would consider someone taking that quantity to be addicted, but it would not cause the damage to the organs that we found. The organs appeared to have been damaged by the abuse of 5 times the quantity that I would consider a high dose. I believe Mr. Priestly was taking over 40 pills per day. The taking of that quantity of medication permanently damaged his organs and directly caused his heart attack. I believe Dr. Phealgud would be negligent in prescribing anything more than 60 pills of each medication on a monthly basis. Based upon my review of records I understand that Dr. Phealgud prescribed over 1000 of each pill in the last 30 days and over 10,000 of each pill during the calendar year 2016. That is criminally negligent.

It seems obvious, but if the sedatives and stimulants are not working, some other method of medical treatment should be employed to treat Mr. Priestly for his insomnia and low energy. The medications were highly addictive and should have been closely monitored. I actually think Mr. Priestly should have been cut off all medication and placed in a rehabilitation facility and the doctor is directly responsible for seeing that happened. I blame Dr. Phealgud for the death of Clovis Priestly. I prepared the Report of Investigation by the County Medical Examiner and I did the follow-up autopsy report.

Affidavit of Sam Snare

My name is Sam Snare. I am 40 years old and one of the band mates and back-up singers for the support band for Clovis Priestly. I was with Mr. Priestly since 2002 and played the drums in the band and sang back up.

Mr. Priestly was one of the greatest entertainers of our lifetime. He was a high energy performer. However, his schedule is what probably did him in. I noticed that around 2010, he always seemed to be "on something". We would play a club or concert and finish up at 3 in the morning. He would be wound up and need something to put him to sleep. We would be talking and I would leave the room and come back 5 minutes later and he would be completely out. I asked him what was the secret. I was informed that he had a prescription for medications that helped him to wake up and go to sleep. He let me try the medications. They worked great. I would stay awake with energy when I needed to and go to sleep when I was done. I did not know about the side effects and long term problems that would come with it.

I talked with Mr. Priestly about what he was taking and how often. He informed me that he would get his doctor to prescribe him pills to last the length of our concert tours. If he ran out of the pills, he would call up the doctor to get some more. I knew the doctor, because I had seen him at Spaceland, Clovis's house, and had seen him on some of our tours.

In Spring of 2011, we were doing a studio session while at Spaceland, I was feeling lethargic and mentioned it to Mr. Priestly and he pointed me toward a large jug in his master bathroom. It was one of those jugs like you would see at a pharmacy. It was full of Myfeetamin pills. The container had about 1000 pills in it. I took one and felt pretty wide awake for length of the rest of the day. As they were all winding down activities, I was still awake. We were all going to crash there for the day. I could not get to sleep, Clovis left the room and came back with a pill that he said was a Quaydude. I was out pretty quickly after that.

This went on for another few years. I was beginning to rely on the pills. I decided enough was enough and I just quit. Cold turkey. I started getting concerned for the welfare of Clovis. I literally saw him pop 10 pills at time. Some days, he would do it more than once. I discussed it with Dr. Phealgud. I argued with Dr. Phealgud.

We came up with a scheme to order placebos. They were pills that looked just like the pills he was supposed to take, but they were sugar pills. The problem was that if Mr. Priestly was not getting the effect he needed, he would just take more pills. Finally, I basically told Dr. Phealgud to get Mr. Priestly off the pills and into rehab or whatever it would take. Dr. Phealgud said he/she would talk to him, but I don't know if he/she ever did.

In June of 2016, Mr. Priestly had overdosed on some of the medication and had to be taken to the hospital. I thought that was a blessing in disguise. I thought his drug addiction would finally be exposed to the world and he could get treatment and assistance with his problems, since his doctor wasn't helping. Priestly's PR people decided to report it to the press as he was being treated for "exhaustion". I was not very happy with that decision. I felt it was time to take on this addiction and they did not. I told Clovis when he got out of the hospital that if he did not go into rehab, I was going to out him to the press on his prescription addiction. I felt it was the only way to save the life of the Ruler of Rock and Roll. Well, Clovis told me that my services were no longer needed and I was fired from the group.

I proceeded to get an article published in one of the music magazines about the fact that Clovis was abusing medications and needed help. Help did not come soon enough. He died before any help was given. I blame his doctor for not intervening.

Affidavit of Detective Jo Kuppa

My name is Jo Kuppa. I am 38 years old and I am a detective with the Republic Police Department. I have been with the department since 2001.

On September 3, 2016, at about 3:30 pm, I was called to the home of Clovis Priestly in regards to a reported death. Mr. Priestly was found unresponsive in his bathroom of the residence known as "Spaceland". Mr. Priestly was one of the best known rock and roll entertainers in our world. His death was a shock at the age of only 42. When I arrived at the scene, I wasn't sure what I was about to see. I notice Dr. Phealgud was there. I also noticed Dr. Phealgud carried a box and put it in the trunk of his/her car. I did not think much of it until later. I walked into the house at about 3:35 pm. I was directed upstairs to a bedroom that adjoined the master bathroom. There, laying on the floor, was the Ruler of Rock and Roll – dead. He was wearing his pajamas and was obviously dead. We immediately had him rushed to BMH for medical attention. They could not revive him.

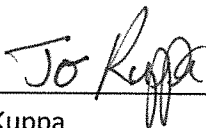

I immediately tried to gain control of the scene in case a crime had occurred. It did not appear to be a crime scene, and I was instructed that it looked like a simple heart attack. The more I looked around, the more suspicious I became. I remember reading an article in "Rolling Rock Magazine" about Mr. Priestly being addicted to medications. I looked in the bathroom for prescription medications, and there was only a small bottle of Codine. Codine is a pain medication. The doctor that had prescribed it, according to the bottle, was a Dr. Soul. Dr. Soul is a well-known dentist in town. I was somewhat amazed that there was no other medication in the bathroom. Then I remembered what I saw Dr. Phealgud doing when I arrived.

I had a search warrant issued for Dr. Phealgud's car. Upon search of the trunk, I found a box containing 4 large jugs of prescriptions. One for Quaydudes, one for Amtral, one for Dextrim and one for Myfeetamin. Each container was labeled for 1000 tablets. I thought that was crazy. I figured it had to be an overdose. I understand that Mr. Priestly did not overdose, but then I had to figure why a person who was only 42 years old was now dead. We got the family to consent to an autopsy. The results were insignificant other than the organs were just ruined because of years of prescription abuse. Dr. Phealgud, in my opinion, was trying to hide the evidence that showed him/her to be responsible for overprescribing Mr. Priestly for years.

I ran a search for prescriptions given to Mr. Priestly and it showed that in the last 6 months, Dr. Phealgud had prescribed over 7,500 pills total to Mr. Priestly. The prescriptions were usually 100 pills at a time but were several days in a row. Most pharmacies have a 100 pill maximum for certain types of prescriptions, especially the type that Mr. Priestly was taking. I found prescriptions for pain medication, sedatives and stimulants.

I asked Dr. Phealgud about the quantity of prescriptions, and he just played it off and said that the entire band would take the prescriptions and it was easier just prescribing to one person and letting everyone use from the same batch. Well, if that is not criminal negligence, I don't know what is. I had a subpoena issued to search the medical practice of Dr. Phealgud. He did not even have a file on Clovis. I don't know if he destroyed it or just never had one. Dr. Phealgud, in my opinion, did not care who took what and in what quantity. He enabled the Ruler of Rock and Roll to ruin his life and career. He should have acted more like a medical doctor, instead of a groupie, and cut off the supply once he saw it was out of control.

Affidavit of Dr. Lou Smith

My name is Lou Smith. I am 52 years old and I am a medical doctor. I have been retained by the defense to testify as an expert witness on the issues involving reasonable and necessary medical care given to Clovis Priestly by Dr. Phealgud, and the actual cause of death.

I am licensed to practice medicine in the state of Texoma. I attended Royce Medical School and did my residency and internships at Boys Memorial Hospital here in Republic, Texoma. I am certified in internal medicine. I have reviewed the medical examiner's report and studied the summary of the autopsy and I actually reviewed the details of the autopsy.

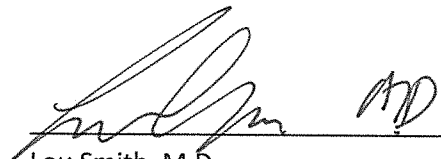

It is my opinion that Dr. Phealgud may not have necessarily acted in the best interest of his patient regarding the quantity of prescriptions he had prescribed over the years, but Dr. Phealgud did not cause the death of Clovis Priestly. Clovis Priestly caused his own death.

Mr. Priestly had a history of abusing medications. That history went all the way back to before he even knew Dr. Phealgud. As Mr. Priestly got older, the abuse became more prevalent. He had a few occurrences where he had to be hospitalized for the abuse. When Mr. Priestly died, he was clearly abusing medications.

The reports indicate that Mr. Priestly died from a heart attack. I agree with that. He did not die from an overdose. The reports indicate that his organs, especially the heart, were oversized. This was probably due to years of misuse of pain medications and sedatives and stimulants. He also had liver damage which I think was caused by the medications. When a person abuses his body, as Mr. Priestly did, it causes the organs to respond and work differently. After years and years of such abuse, his heart was just forced to work too hard. He died from a heart attack or hypertensive cardiovascular disease. There was not enough medication in his system to cause him to overdose.

It is true that I have been paid $750.00 per hour for my services as an expert. My resume justifies such a dollar amount. All experts get paid and just because the defense has paid me a lot of money, it had no influence on my opinion about Dr. Phealgud. My career as a testifying expert is too important to me to throw it all away for a few thousand dollars.

AFFIDAVIT OF DR. NIK PHEALGUD

My name is Nik Phealgud. I was Clovis Priestly's personal doctor for the last 10 years until he died unexpectedly on September 3, 2016. I helped prescribe the constellation of uppers, downers, laxatives, narcotics, hormones and shots that kept Clovis going through the last decade of his life.

I met Mr. Priestly in 2007. He was well known in the music world as the Ruler of Rock and Roll. I was introduced to him at a social gathering. He came into my office and we discussed his issues. Since I am defending myself in an almost murder charge, I have the right to share what he told me. The cause of death was officially recorded as 'fatal heart arrhythmia'- a heart attack. I understand that blood tests conducted at the Coroner's laboratory showed traces of 5 different drugs in Clovis's body at the time of his death. I did not kill Clovis.

I have practice internal medicine for about 25 years. Clovis was my most famous patient and I gave him most of my attention. Initially I treated Clovis for insomnia. But by 2010, this was no simple task. Clovis had a history of disrupted sleep, sleepwalking and nightmares going back to childhood. It intensified after the death of his mother in 2009. He became a night person. I was commissioned to help him with his sleep problems.

By the time he became my patient, Clovis was a dedicated student of the Physician's Desk Reference, the doctor's encyclopedia of contemporary pharmacology. He was taking an exotic cocktail of uppers and downers: Quaydudes, Amtral, Dextrim and Myfeetamin. And he was going to increasing lengths to get ahold of them - sending 'the posse' off to Vegas on prescription shopping trips.

At first, I treated Clovis only on the odd occasions when he came back to Republic. I didn't really become his primary doctor until he moved back to his house at Spaceland in the city of Republic fulltime in 2009.

But in 2010, Clovis began touring and performing for months at a time giving live performances at the International Hotel in Las Vegas. I went with him. Throughout my time with Clovis, Clovis's reliance upon a regime of drugs to get him going when he awoke and bring him down at bedtime was intensified by the concert schedule. Now, he needed stimulants before a show, and then sedatives afterwards: and there were two shows every night. When he was around, I tried to manage Clovis's intake. But when I wasn't around, there was a roll-call of other doctors only too happy to fulfill his requirements.

In 2015, he overdosed twice on stimulants. He began cancelling shows more and more frequently. At the end of the year he was admitted, semi-comatose, to the Boys Memorial Hospital in Republic. This time, he had been secretly seeing a doctor in Vegas. He had become poisoned by cortisone injections and was addicted to the opiate painkiller Dumberall. I put him on a drug to wean him off the Dumberall and began to try to stop the flow of contraband pills from other doctors.

Clovis' problem was that he didn't see the wrong in it. He felt that by getting it from a doctor, he wasn't the common everyday junkie getting something off the street. He was a person who thought that as far as medications and drugs went, there was something for everything.

While he was in hospital, I went into his bedroom at Spaceland and found three giant pharmacy-sized jars, each containing 1,000 high-dose Quaydudes, Amtral, Dextrim and Myfeetamin. Afterwards, whenever Clovis went to see a dentist or another doctor for any reason, I went with him, because he would always talk these guys into anything- crazy things.

When I refused to give him what he wanted, he'd just find another doctor. He'd get mad at me, and he'd get on his plane and fly wherever and stay for a few days and get what he wanted. And I'd have to take it away from him when he got back home. This petulant hunger for drugs was such that, when I thought Clovis was claiming symptoms he didn't have, I began to administer placebos. On the road, he says, he was so afraid that he wouldn't get enough sleep to do a good show the next night that he would end up asking you for an extra pill or two. So those extra pill or twos would be placebos. I actually got one of his drug manufacturers to create a special batch of pills that looked like the real thing.

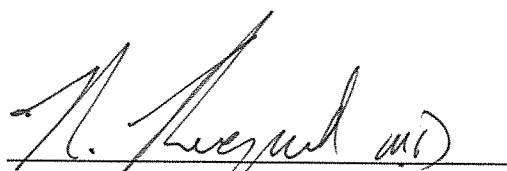

Myself and the guys in his gang in their spare hours on tour would make pills for the Ruler. Using syringes, they'd suck the liquid out of capsules and refill them with saline solution. When Clovis asked for a shot that he didn't need, I would wait until his back was turned, squirt the liquid on the floor, and then 'inject' him with the emptied syringe. Tablets were trickier. Eventually, I managed to persuade Knowlling, the manufacturers of Clovis's favorite painkiller, to press a special batch of a thousand pills without any active ingredients. It took a year of letter-writing and legal wrangling. But they looked just like the real thing. They cost me $5.98 apiece.

After a series of embarrassing on-stage disasters and show cancellations when other doctors tried their methods on Clovis, I became the regular tour physician. Licensed only to prescribe drugs in Texoma, I would stock him up on 'supplies' before leaving the state. After the first couple of times out, he got to know what he would need in advance. He began each tour with three locked suitcases filled with prescription drugs. My job was taking care of the whole entourage. There were about 150 people I took care of. You had a couple of bands. You had the songbirds. You had the people that set up the stage... And all these people were night people, too.

I made sure the drugs for Mr. Priestly were strictly controlled. On tour, I would go to him at regular intervals: on waking; before the show; after the show; and at bedtime. Each time, he would be allowed specific stimulants and sedatives in the lowest doses I thought I could get away with. At home, without the excuse that he needed the medications to perform, Clovis was given just the manila envelopes of sleeping tablets - 'bedtime packet number one' and 'bedtime packet number two'- to be handed out separately during the night. During the 10 years I treated him, I never knew Priestly to sleep for longer than three hours at a stretch without waking up, looking for more pills. I don't think Mr. Priestly knew what he was doing to himself.

On the day of his death, I was on the premises already. I received a call and came running. While in the bathroom, I noticed all of the medications I had just prescribed for the crew. I put it in my car for safekeeping because I did not know how many people would be in the house. I was not trying to hide anything. I admit to prescribing a lot of medication, but it was for a lot of people. His death, while tragic, was because of a heart attack and not because my actions.

Affidavit of Toni Taggart

My name is Toni Taggart. I am a long time friend of Clovis Priestly. We went to high school together. I became one of his most trust friends. He put me on the payroll. I live on site at Spaceland, which is his estate.

I was present in the home on September 3, 2016 when he died. He had finished a concert in Muskie, which is in the state of Okie. We flew back to Republic and arrived about 3:00 am. He was wound up and played racketball for a little while at his court on the property. I last saw him about 5:00 am when I went to sleep. The entire band at this point was set on a schedule of taking pills to wake up and to sleep. They felt the pills helped them to avoid appearing sluggish. Anyway, on that day, I woke up at about 3:30 in the afternoon and went to wake up Clovis, because we had to start packing for our 30 day tour. I went to his bedroom and his bed was empty. I saw the bathroom door was shut. I knocked on it and got no answer.

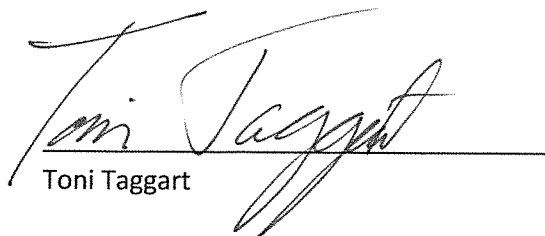

I went downstairs and asked some of the other crew if they had seen him. No one had. I felt something was not right. I ran back upstairs and knocked on the door again and then opened it and saw his body lying on the floor. His body looked blue and was rigid. I panicked and went looking for Dr. Phealgud, who was usually on the property. Dr. Phealgud tended to him and told someone to call "911" and I did it. Police and ambulance personnel showed up and he was taken away.

In the years and months leading up to this day, Clovis was almost always taking medication. He had a bad back and that got him hooked on pain meds. Later, he started taking these stimulants and sedatives to wake up or to go to sleep. It was odd. I would be having a conversation with Clovis and he would be wide awake, then he would take this little pill, or several of them, and within minutes, he was completely out. I tried it once to go to sleep, but I did not like the effects so I never did it again. I know that a lot of the band members took pills. I do not know if they were taking the same pills that Clovis took or if they were each prescribed their own. I also know that Clovis had large tubs of the medication in the bathroom.

At one point, a few years ago, we did become so concerned about the medication that we talked to Dr. Phealgud. At first, the gang under the direction of Dr. Phealgud created placebo medications, trying to get him weaned off the drugs. After that became hard to pull off, they came up with this scheme to have the drug manufacturers to create placebos that looked just like the real pills. I don't remember which medications it was for, but all of the gang was in on the scheme. Clovis did not fall for it because he just wasn't getting the effects that he said he needed and would just keep taking the pills. Finally, he confronted Dr. Phealgud and Dr. Phealgud told him what they had done. Clovis was very angry and basically told the doctor if he ever violated his trust again, he/she would need to start looking for some other patients because he/she would be fired. He also said something along the lines of doctors were a dime a dozen and if he would not give what he needed, someone would.

I think Dr. Phealgud was trying to do what was in Clovis best interest.

AUTOPSY REPORT

Name: Clovis Priestly

Date and time found dead: September 3, 2016, 3:30 pm

Died at 3764 Clovis Priestly Blvd., Republic, Texoma

Date of Examination: September 19, 2016

EXTERNAL EXAMINATION: The body is identified by tags affixed to the extremities.

The deceased is that of a 42 year old, overweight male, 72 inches tall, weighing 242 pounds. There is some evidence of a bruise on the head and upper left chest region.

EVIDENCE OF TREATMENT:

There are EKG pads on the body.

EVIDENCE OF INJURY:

There is no visible sign of an injury.

INTERNAL EXAMINATION:

HEAD: The brain weighs 1390 grams. There is no evidence of pre-existing natural disease or injury. There is a contusion on the left side of the head consistent with slight head trauma.

NECK: No contusions or hemorrhages are present.

SEROUS CAVITIES: The pleural, pericardial and peritoneal cavities are free of abnormal accumulations of fluid.

CARDIOVASCULAR SYSTEM: The heart is 600 grams (normal male is 270 – 360 gm). The pericardium is fibrotic and adherent to the heart. The coronary arteries reveal serious atherosclerosis with 75% stenosis by plaque.

GASTROINTESTINAL SYSTEM: The liver weighs 2010 grams (normal male is 1400 – 1900). The small and large intestines are clogged.

RETICULOENDOTHELIAL SYSTEM: The spleen is slightly enlarged weighing 250 grams (normal 125 – 195 grams).

OPINION:

The cause of death is due to the effects of heart failure resulting from hypertensive cardiomyopathy with focal coronary atherosclerosis. Microscopic examination revealed up to 75% narrowing of a major coronary vessel. Toxicology report show non-lethal amounts of the sedatives, Quaydude and Amtral, and the stimulants, Dextrim and Myfeetamin. The pain killer Codine was also found in the system at a fairly high level. I am satisfied that cause of death is correctly stated as a heart attack. The secondary causes of death are organ failure caused by
